Regarding the Grand Canyon, includes extensive narrative material about, and interjected quotations from, the Ives expedition (Ives, 1861), with the remarks (pp. 49-50), "But Lieutenant Ives' party was not the first * * * And the party of Ewing Young, containing Kit Carson, were the first Americans, and the first white men after Garces, to cross it. * * * From the camp beside the water it was another four days' entrada . . . to the Colorado, which was struck at the Grand Cañon. I am inclined to think that this point was near the western end of the Grand Cañon proper, or about at the sharp elbow (on the map) where it is marked Diamond Creek and the present Walapai reservation. [¶] It 'failed not to awaken a thrill of delight in every member of the party,' inscribes Peters, Carson's earliest biographer." (reordering Peters, 1883, ITEM NO. 2.15926). But see remarks with Camp (1922, ITEM NO. 2.28416).] [See also Sabin (1913, ITEM NO. 6.1638) for a historical fiction rendition of Kit Carson's adventures for younger readers, through the eyes of "the boy Oliver".]

funny. Lady passenger without any clothes. Why? She had space in car 410 which is the rear car. Had friends in one of the forward cars which was a straight room car. She undressed there and went back to car 410 and to bed. On arrival of train No. 4 at Williams, car 410 was put on train No. 12 which leaves Williams ahead of No. 4. When arising in the morning, found she was without apparel and was very much excited. Found it necessary to remain in bed until train was switched together again at the Grand Canyon and her apparel recovered. The practice of handling cars in this manner was immediately discontinued. Why? Santa Fe service." (ENTIRE NOTE)]

Wish to correct error in July issue, pages 31 and 32, in regard to cost of living. The rate for meals mentioned in the article is at the El Tovar Hotel, Grand Canyon, only, and we are very much in hopes that the new manager there has by this time had it cut to the old rate. He has told me that he has taken the matter up with the Harvey management at Kansas City. We all wish him luck in his undertaking of same." (ENTIRE NOTE) The manager there noted was Sidney L. Beneditto, who had assumed management of El Tovar after the death of Charles A. Brant (refer to Anonymous, 1922, ITEM NOS. 2.23784, 2.23785; and Henry J. The rate to Pullman Conductors for dinner has been raised from 75 cents to $1.00, for no known reason, but guess we will have to stand for it. But it is some meal. It is not to be wondered at that the boys all like the good old SANTA FE, for you know there is an old saying, feed well and we'll all be happy. ["Referring to the editorial note in Engineering News of April 19 (p. 447) we will say that on again reading our news sheet you will note that the cable is to be stretched from bank to bank across the granite gorge of the Colorado River, and not from rim to rim of the Canyon itself. The Grand Canyon may be likened to a deep trough—the river runs through the bottom of the trough in a narrow gorge, through the granite, about 1,000 ft. deep and from 300 to 400 ft. wide. [¶] In using this aerial ferry, the tourist will go down Bright Angel trail from the hotel, eight miles on horse back to the top of the granite wall, take the cable across about 400 ft. and then ascend the north wall about twelve miles. Of course a cable, stretched 18 miles from rim to rim would be impossible and absurd." Did you ever hear the chatter of the tourists on the rim of the Grand Cañon?—Chicago Tribune . [¶] Commenting on the foregoing, W. H. Simpson, in charge of advertising for the Santa Fe, says: 'Perhaps it is also because the said tourists go hither and yon!' [¶] Or, also, perhaps it is because nearly all of the them arrive at the cañon in sleepers. [ ¶ ] The "Chop" hill locale stated to be the place of the Richard Kern illustration of 1851 (published by Sitgreaves, 1853) seems not to be correct. Based on field observations and comparisons by R. D. Quartaroli et al. , from "Chop" hill and elsewhere in the San Francisco Peaks during Fall 2013, the scene depicted by Kern seems to be higher in elevation and on the west side of the San Francisco Peaks. Further investigations still are to be made; the onset of winter weather precluded continued work in 2013. [ ¶ ] Tom Jonas and Andrew Wallace have likewise reinvestigated the vantage point of Kern's drawing. The locale seems to be on the western side of the San Francisco Peaks, as the twin hills in Kern's drawing are the White Horse Hills. The vantage point, at about 9100 ft elevation, seems now to have been obscured by trees, but Jonas and Wallace believe | that the position has been identified within a few hundred feet. (vide Tom Jonas in correspondence, January 2015). [NOTE: This revised information also appeared in Spamer (2022, ITEM NO. 2.30979).] • EMENDA: Figure legends (omitted in press): Figure 1. "Grand Canon. Mountains of Chiricahui, opposite Head Springs Valle de Sauz Cienega." (Gray, 1856, plate facing p. 48.) This is the first illustration of any place labeled as "Grand Canyon." It is in the Chiricahua Mountains of southern Arizona. Figure 2. "View Looking West, from Camp 16." (Sitgreaves, 1853, Plate 13.) The detail (top) is enlarged from the right half of the horizon line, which depicts the North Rim of the Grand Canyon about 70 miles distant. The published legend, "View Looking West," is not precise; the view is more panoramic and northwesterly. Figure 3. Excerpt from Samuel Washington Woodhouse's diary, October 11, 1851, where he mentions seeing the Grand Canyon from the San Francisco Peaks. His writing lacks punctuation and some capitalization: "from here was to be seen the course of the great Colorado and the tops of the mountain and rocky bluffs which form the great canon this must really be an awful yet grand spectacl [sic] I should suppose that the nearest point was about 70 miles nothing like water was to be seen". Illustrated here for the first time. This is the earliest record thus far found of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado River by this name, twelve years before John Wesley Powell's first expedition and even a year before the Ives expedition reached parts of the canyon's South Rim. <sup>182</sup> Regarding the numerous oral-history interviews conducted by Lew Steiger and published in Boatman's Quarterly Review, the authorships noted in this bibliography reflect the interviewee's name, and Steiger's. In the earlier interviews, items carried the Steiger by-line, sometimes with other interviewers. In later interviews, no by-line appears. Those interviews that appeared under the Steiger by-line first are listed under Steiger, here; unsigned interviews are listed under the interviewees' names (with Steiger and any other interviewers listed as coauthors). Thus the citations are made with bibliographical precision, reflecting information as published and by which citations and future searches by others will be made.

- 2020      2.29183      From cover to cover. In nine and a half decades, we've published well over a thousand covers—the number is getting close to 1,150. - 2013      2.19329      (EDS.) A look back. For a place that's evolved over millions of years, it's probably an overstatement to refer to a collection of photos as "historic." However, in terms of the Grand Canyon as a national park, these old black-and-whites offer an interesting glimpse of the good old days. Arizona Highways, 89(11) (November): cover, 1, 16-33. Symons includes (p. 303) remarks from his experience "on the Colorado River some years ago" when he was "chief engineer of a steamer running from Lower California up into the mouth of the Grand Canyon". At certain times of the year snowmelt in Utah caused the "Little Virgin River" (Virgin River) to produce deposits that "were of such a character that made it almost impossible to operate the steamship. * * * The mixture of these waters resulted in a condition that had the effect of loosening the scale on the boilers formed by the other water and was, in effect, a boiler compound which would result in cleaning them out."] |

Symons includes (p. 182) remarks from his experience "some twenty odd years ago when I was acting in the capacity of engineer on a river steamer on the Colorado River". His remarks were in response to the lecturer's note of a problem of hard water that caused his locomotive boiler to "foam or prime", and Symons' reminiscence of problematic water quality of high flows of "reddish" water flowing into the Colorado from the "Little Virgin river" (Virgin River) producing the same sort of problem by further hardening the main stream's water.]  |

The letter concludes with unrelated remarks (p. 36): "You must ask Professor Larkin for a description of the Grand Canyon of Arizona. That is a cut in the face of the level mesa that takes one's breath away, it is the most glorious thing on earth. You put Niagara into it and it would only make a shining patch of misty water against one little bit of one of those awful, wonderful walls. * * * ¶ But, dear heart, the Canyon is the closest thing to the overpowering that exists. ¶ I was talking with a gentleman who was with the English when they entered Lhasa. He says nothing in the Himalayas can compare with this gorge, this Arizona Canyon, and it is true, I fancy, for when this man first looked down into this wonderful gorge he gasped with sheer pleasure."] |

I went to sleep on the bench and had a dream, and I saw in the distance the clouds trying to obscure the beautiful sunlight, and I looked down in that awful chasm below, and I saw the strong colorings, the red and yellow, and overhead the beautiful velvet blue, and I saw four words plainly printed on the horizon in [the] distance two hundred and ten miles off, 'Press towards the mark.' We know what our duty is on twisting." - 1919      2.30406      My generation : an autobiographical interpretation. Boston and New York: Houghton Mifflin Co. (The Riverside Press, Cambridge), 464 pp. [See p. 369, "I will recall with peculiar pleasure the visit to Berkeley—the outward trip by the Santa Fé, though we missed for lack of time the Grand Canyon . . . ." Then, having missed the San Francisco earthquake by hours, which impacted rail traffic, "We had intended to return by the same route by which we came out, to recover the side trip to the Grand Canyon which we had missed, but for this we were in no mood had the way been open to us. There is no experience so depressing to a stranger as the sense that he is not only absolutely useless, but altogether in the way anywhew within the environment of a great local calamity." ### U.S. National Park Service

NOTE for all U.S. National Park Service citations: After the Second World War, National Park Service guides to park units became essentially just guides to services and activities, foregoing the pre-war style of including essays and other culturally informative texts in addition to visitors' information and rules and regulations. The pre-war publications are cited here in Part 2 (GENERAL PUBLICATIONS) of this bibliography—see also under U.S. Department of the Interior. However, pre-war guides specifically for hiking, driving and similar activities are listed in Part 9 of this bibliography. Beginning in 1977 park-specific productions include the standardized "Unigrid" publications, which feature a black-background banner on the front of each, with at least the Park Service unit noted as text within the banner (see examples in the Notes to Part 9). Special accessibility guides for physically impaired users are also listed in Part 5 of this bibliography. See also Part 6/Section 1 for Park Service items that were produced for younger readers and users. See also Part 31 (NEWSPAPERS) of the bibliography for citations of pertinent park-unit newspapers, which served similar functions to the activities guides (for example, Grand Canyon National Park Guide and related titles, ITEM NO. 31.36).

- _____     2.21843     Southwestern Monuments Monthly Report. U.S. National Park Service. [Mimeographed reports, distributed among the National Monument units of the Southwest, ca. 1932-1940. Reports in this serial will include those from the caretaker at Pipe Spring National Monument.] [Specific items of interest in some issues are cited separately in this bibliography.]
- _____     2.6506     Annual Reports of the Director. Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office. [Usually within other Congressional documents.] [Specific items of interest in some issues are cited separately in this bibliography.] [Various dates.]

The original Spanish documents are not known to exist. Also, regarding Ramusio's translation, see Flint and Flint, 2005, ITEM NO. 2.29150, endnote 2, p. 652.] [NOTE: Wheat (1957, Volume I, p. 18, and in Bibliocartography, p. 187) takes note that the letter included a "drawing" of the route that had been followed, a map that was not included in Ramussio, nor has it been rediscovered. (The modern translation from Ramussio by Flint and Flint, 2005, ITEM NO. 2.29150, p. 254, renders the map as a "painting" more particular to portraying the "rugged mountains and rivers" [see their endnote 25 on p. 653]; perhaps thus it was a pictorial map, like those of Miera de Pacheco [noted particularly in the Cartobibliography (THE GRAND CANON Volume 2; in the present volume refer to Part 25). Nonetheless, Wheat listed this putative map as the first item in his "Bibliocartography", "for, though still undiscovered, it may one day come to light, and it well merits the number one position accorded it in the accompanying bibliocartography." (p. 18). Although of peripheral interest to the present bibliography, the map would not have included any information about the separate expedition that reached the Grand Canyon, as that did not take place until September 1540.] [In Italian.]

[First paragraph notes ( translated here ): "Once, two travel companies from Las Vegas turned to the American representatives of the Eurocopter concern, taking their guests to the Grand Canyon with EU350 helicopters. The passengers were satisfied, but the practical and unpretentious vehicle, which earned a reputation as a reliable 'workhorse', still lacked comfort and visibility. For this, the Americans came to Eurocopter. The single-engine EC130 was a guide's dream." The remainder of the article refers to EC130 specifications and uses in Russian markets.] [In Russian, with item title in mixed Cyrillic and Roman orthography, and serial title in English.] |

| 1884 | 2.23727 | [Letter, addressed from Needles, California.] In : Fraternal [SECTION]. The Railway Conductors' Monthly , 1(5) (May 1): 246-248. [See p. 246, "Echo of the shrill voice of the locomotive whistle follows echo, as we go bounding over the immense mountain divides, or whirling with lightning rapidity through the canons thousands of feet in depth, the most wonderful of which is the 'Grand Canon of the Colorado,' (and perhaps the most wonderful in the world,) the immensity of which must be seen to be realized; evidently formed by volcanic eruptions, thousands upon thousands of years ago. To give some idea of its height: as you stand at the bottom at noon in a clear day and look towards the heavens it seems as tho' the summit of the canon touched the skies, 7,500 feet up, and you see stars as distinctly as tho' 'twere midnight; one is struck with awe and admiration at the mighty works of nature. Such are some of the scenes along the line of the 'all the year 'round route,' the Atlantic & Pacific R. R." Entire item is chiefly about the men of the Aztec Division.] |
| 1885 | 2.14777 | [Letter, addressed from Needles, California.] In : Fraternal [SECTION]. The Railway Conductors' Monthly , 2(6) (June 1): 340-342. [See p. 342, comment on scenery "along" the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad, including, "most beautiful, (the) Grand Canon of the Colorado, 8,500 high [ sic ], a most wonderful sight, and would repay any visitor a trip over the road". See also pp. 341-342: "H. L. Northrup, chief traveling auditor . . . who has discovered an animal among the lateral canons to the 'Grand'—he has named the Prox—having two short legs on one side, seemingly formed by nature for running around sidehills—a wonderful freak in nature." The travelers witnessed a sunrise and a sunset. Drives were taken to various points of view on the brink of the canyon and many of the sight-seers rode down the canyon on bronchos via 'Bright Angel Trail.' The sublime grandeur of the canyon must be seen to be appreciated, and it is then indelibly photographed on the mind." (ENTIRE NOTE)]

Wilson, Eric

- 2015      2.29701      I sing you for an apple. New England Review, 36(2): 54-67. ("In memoriam Steinbjørn Berghamar Jacobsen, September 30, 1937-April 12, 2012".) [Regarding the author's fill-in service as an escort interpreter for Jacobsen, the Faroese-speaking poet and writer during a U.S. tour. (Wilson did not speak Faroese himself but made do with some knowledge of old Icelandic and Swedish, "with Danish words thrown in", since Jacobsen's Danish was actually "something of his own invention". Eventually incorporating more Faroese words, their "two versions of 'Danish' more or less merged"; all this was compounded by Jacobsen's free use of alcohol). Concludes (pp. 64-66) with recollections of Jacobsen's spur-of-the-moment decision to hike into Grand Canyon alone, without shirt or shoes(!), and his late arrival back on the rim in poor condition after apparently having gone to the bottom. Jacobsen recounted that he had, in very broken English, begged food and water from hikers: "I sing you for an apple". He said that he would write a memoir about his American trip. "He would not entitle it in the Faeroese 'Eg sang fryi eitt súrepli!' It would be just what he had told the other hikers, in English: 'I Sing You for an Apple!'" [For this bibliography I have found Jacobsen's memoir, in Faroese, which does include Grand Canyon, but it is entitled Brá úr USA (Jacobsen, 1982, ITEM NO. 2.29694).]

[Report of meeting Clarence Frank Birdseye, II, aboard a train "coming down from Michigan". In quotation format, principally of Birdseye's recounting activities studying wolves for the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Includes the note: "I have been over a good deal of the West, over the desert, down into southern Utah, across the Grand Canyon, in Arizona and New Mexico. I have lived among the Moquis and among the Navajos and other Indians and explored hidden and abandoned cities of cliff dwellers. Once I found a new species of rat in an old cliff dweller house. I reckon he was a descendant of one of the rats that troubled the old people who lived there 10,000 years ago, maybe." Clarence Birdseye, later the frozen-foods entrepreneur, was a distant cousin of Claude H. Birdseye, who surveyed the Colorado River through Grand Canyon (see references to Claude H. Birdseye in this bibliography).] |

SUPPLEMENT TO PART 2

Potentially Offensive Material Cited Separately

Part 2 includes citations of items that contain potentially offensive material, with sexual or other matter that some users, for religious, moral, or personal reasons, may not wish to encounter. The pertinent citations are grouped in this Supplement. It is additionally important to segregate these citations as this is an internationally focused bibliography with an international audience, whose particular perspectives may not be known to this compiler. The cited items themselves may contain explicit material but a few of them do not; yet these, too, are segregated because the serials in which they appear do contain such matter. (Off-color language is not considered reason for segregation.)
