Coues' F.* [MANUSCRIPT, American Philosophical Society, Philadelphia (Mss.917.3 L58, Codex F).] [NOTE: The assignments of codices, physical labelling on the journal covers, and page numbering were made by Elliott Coues, ca. 1892.] [See manuscript p. 106 (the journals' leaves were not enumerated at the time they were written), spellings thus: "from this narative I was convinced that the streams of which he [Cameahwait, chief of the Shoshone] has spoken as runing through the plains and that on which his relations lived were southern branches of the Columbia, heading with the rivers Apostles and Collorado, and that the rout he had pointed out was to the Vermillion Sea or gulph of

<sup>176</sup> The citations of published journal entries of Meriwether Lewis here represent the principal editions about the journals of Lewis and Clark based on the original manuscripts. There are many issues under many imprints that either simply reprint existing works, abridge them, or liberally edit and paraphrase them. The American Philosophical Society, Philadelphia, holds the majority of the Lewis and Clark journals, which had been transmitted there by Thomas Jefferson, who happened to be President of the Society concurrently with his U.S. presidency. While Meriwether Lewis and his contemporaries did not know of the Grand Canyon, and likely only superficially knew of the Colorado River, one of the purposes of the Lewis and Clark Expedition through the lands acquired in the Louisiana Purchase and disputed lands beyond, under directions from Jefferson and funded by Congress, was to ascertain the likelihood of a water-dominant route between the United States and the Pacific Ocean, a goal of course not realized. The expedition, not knowing what lay ahead as they crossed the Rocky Mountains, inquired of native tribes as to various prospects for a route. This sole mention of the Colorado River and its outlet into the Gulf of California corresponds with the meager contemporary understandings of the route and landscape of the Colorado between its headwaters and its lower reaches. One can surmise what would have become of the success of the expedition had for some reason they decided to travel southward. This quotation from the journals stands out as an early American attention to (and dismissal) of the Colorado River's transit to the sea as a potential route for communication and commerce, which however, during the 19th century, is an idea that recurs, as testified by citations elsewhere in this bibliography. See also Jefferson (1814, ITEM NO. [2.8570).]

Callifornia."]<sup>177,178</sup> • [Manuscripts are not normally cited in this bibliography, but this citation supports various published printings (see the other citations under

- <sup>177</sup> Historians of the Lewis and Clark Expedition have well discussed a MANUSCRIPT map (WHEAT I:239 [as "c. 1796 The West"]) of the western part of North America by Nicholas King, 1803, now in the Library of Congress (cataloged there, in square brackets thus: "[Lewis and Clark map, with annotations in brown ink by Meriwether Lewis, tracing showing the Mississippi, the Missouri for a short distance above Kansas, Lakes Michigan, Superior, and Winnipeg, and the country onwards to the Pacific]", digitized online at <https://www.loc.gov/item/98687178/>). This map has been identified as having been modified from a part of the just-published map by Arrowsmith (1802, CARTOBIBLIOGRAPHY ITEM NO. 25.1192, WHEAT I:253; Cartobibliography is THE GRAND CANON Volume 2) and apparently the manuscript had been taken on the expedition. (For a discussion, see John Logan Allen, Passage Through the Garden : Lewis and Clark and the Image of the American Northwest (University of Illinois Press, Urbana, 1976), pp. 97-103, figure 21 [pp. 100-101].) (King's map is also illustrated in Gary Moulton, The Journals of the Lewis and Clark Expedition. Volume 1. Atlas of the Lewis and Clark Expedition (University of Nebraska Press, Lincoln and London, 1983), map 2.) The manuscript map includes in its southwestern part bare sketches of three rivers flowing southward to southwestward: "Rio Colorado" on the west, "Rio des los Apostolos" to its east, and farther east "Rio Norte or Rio Bravo" that is the Rio Grande. North of the headwater areas of these rivers is a broad swatch labeled "Conjectural". The course of each of these rivers is an emendation because they are displayed very differently from their courses (and labeling) on the Arrowsmith map (see below). Allen (figure 22, p. 116) also displays "the King 1803 map compared with a modern base map", which overlays the King river courses on the modern base map. Interestingly, and coincidentally, the "Rio des los Apostolos" parallels the upper Colorado River to its east about to the position where would be the eastern Grand Canyon; the "Rio Colorado" parallels the upper Colorado River to its west to where would be the confluence of the Colorado and Virgin Rivers. Take note as well that on many contemporary maps, the supposed river of the Apostles is usually shown west of the lower course of the Colorado River, often without definite headwaters or outlet though occasionally meeting the lowermost Colorado near the Gulf of California. On examining Allen's overlay against the King map, it is apparent that there is a disconnection; that, with respect to latitude, King placed these rivers several degrees too far north according to his lines of latitude. Although the relationships of all the rivers on King's map are faithful in proportion to each other on Allen's overlay (compared to King's original), for some reason the overlay shows the Colorado actually reaching to the correct latitude for Grand Canyon as shown on the modern base map. (For comparison here, the 1802 Arrowsmith map shows the area north and northwest of the "Gulf of California" as mostly blank. "Rio Colorado or Red River" and "R. del Coral" are depicted as separate streams, with the Colorado coming from the northeast and the Coral coming from the east; once near each other both continue on separate courses southwestward to the head of the gulf. One of the upper tributaries of the "Coral" is labeled "Rio Hillo". One of two northerly tributaries to the "Coral" is labeled "Rio del Azul or Blue R.", both of which have headwaters common with the Colorado. "Rio Bravo or Rio Rio del Norte" is more correctly shown on the course of the Rio Grande southward and southeastward from the vicinity of Santa Fe.)
- <sup>178</sup> See also the 1805 MANUSCRIPT map (WHEAT II:270): "A Map of part of the Continent of North America, Between the 35th and 51st degrees of North Latitude, and extending from 89° Degrees [sic] of West Longitude to the Pacific Ocean: Compiled from the Authorities of the best informed travellers by M. Lewis. Note, The Missouri River from Fort Mandan in Lat. 47° 25' 47" N, and in Long. 101° West from the meridian of Greenwich, is corrected by Celestial Observations. The Country West of Fort Mandan is laid down principally from Indian information.", "Copied by Nicholas King, 1805." (Library of Congress, digitized online at <https://lccn.loc.gov/00560525>.) The southwestern quadrant of this sketch map depicts "River Colorado" and "R. de los Apostolos.", both flowing southward from headwaters south of the area of interest to Lewis and Clark; they converge at the head of "Gulf of California", where is labeled "S<sup>t</sup> Pedro". This map, as was the 1803 manuscript map, is illustrated in Allen's Passage Through the Garden (pp. 232-233), with a comparable overlay on a modern base map (p. 234) The 1805 map is illustrated in Moulton's Atlas of the Lewis and Clark Expedition, map 32b (and variants, 32a, 32c). Notably, the southwestern rivers are shown a decidedly farther

November 28, 2017, so as to compare the varied transcriptions published by Biddle (1814, in edited form; see Lewis, 1814, ITEM NO. 2.26326), Coues (1892, in edited form; see Lewis, 1892, ITEM NO. 2.26327), Thwaites (1904; see Lewis, 1904, ITEM NO. 2.26296), DeVoto (1953; see Lewis, 1953, ITEM NO. 2.26328), and Moulton (1988; see Lewis, 1988, ITEM NO. 2.9000). Regarding disparities of dates as published in these editions, Thwaites was the first to note that Lewis had apparently rewritten, at least in part at a later date, the account of William Clark's discussion with Cameahwait. Some editors chose to correct the date to reflect the rewriting, as opposed to what was actually written on the journal page by Lewis, which recorded the date of the event.]

"This invention relates to an improved scenic structure for more completely giving pictorial representations of objects—as, for example, landscapes . . . ." "The scene (usually a landscape) is painted upon the background . . . and upon the wings, according to the nature of the view. If this part of the work be done artistically, the effect is very pleasing to the eye, and an accurate impression of the natural scene can be conveyed even in cases when an ordinary drawing or flat picture does not succeed. This is notably true of such views as the Grand Cañon of the Colorado, where it is extremely difficult by ordinary means to give a correct impression of the vastness of the scene coupled with the descent of the ground before the eye, and which can be very successfully done by this means." The celestial mechanics of electrically charged planets. In: Payne-Gaposchkin, Cecilia, "Worlds In Collision". American Philosophical Society, Proceedings, 96(5) (October): 524-525. [Payne-Gaposchkin, pp. 519-524. See p. 525, reference to Boulder Dam. Article is an evaluation of the celestial mechanics required in producing the planetary effects postulated by Immanuel Velikovsky in Worlds In Collision, 1950). Cited here for the remark, "Trying to put such an electric field on the sun resembles trying to hold back the entire mass of water in Lake Mead by a Boulder Dam made of tissue paper sheets."]

Downey quoted (pp. 117-120), who notes Wergeland in a rare moment of free expression (pp. 118-119), "Jeg husker hvordan hun endog efterlignet indianerne som hun hadde set danse ved Grand Canyon i Colorado. Med sin følelse for det historiske hadde hun moret sig over dette glimt av en forbigangen tidsalder og et primi tivt folkeslag. Men selve Grand Canyon—den store flænge i jordens skjød—forekom hende forførdelig, overvældende med sin groteskhet, med sin vilde pragt. Alt dette stod for hende som aarhundreders gravplads—altfor rædselsfuldt til at bli beundret." Downey quoted (pp. 104-107), who notes Wergeland in a rare moment of free expression (p. 105), "I recall how she even imitated for us the curious steps of the Indians whom she had seen dance at the Grand Canyon of the Colorado. With her instinct for the historic, she had deeply enjoyed this glimpse of primitive times and of a primitive people. But the Grand Canyon itself—that immense gash in the earth—had appalled her, overwhelmed her with its grotesqueness, with its savage magnificence. It was to her as a graveyard of the centuries—too awesome to be loved." (ENTIRE NOTE) See also photo (p. 202), "Dr. Wergeland at Grand Canyon writing 'The Desert Rose'. Summer 1913." See under the section, "Lore of Mythology", p. 752: Vulcan, in an outrage, "kicked over the huge tub, full of flaming color, in high dugeon; the immense flood of red water thus dashed against the cliffs, stained them the ruddy reds you see, and thus was Bryce Canyon in scenic Southern Utah given its charm of color. The great mass of water, thus suddenly thrown out, cut and wore, tumbled and churned, and chiselled its way to the sea, cutting that great gorge behind Bryce Canyon, which crass men unknowingly dub 'The Grand Canyon of the Colorado,' retaining in that appellation nothing of the true origin of the gorge except the Spanish word Colorado, which means red, ruddy." appendant islands: with a particular description of Louisiana. Boston: Thomas and Andrews, 3rd ed., revised and corrected, [unpaginated], 2 maps. [See frontispiece map, "North America". The Colorado River and vague tributaries are delineated but not labeled, as are other rivers. It appears that both the Colorado and Gila rivers are drawn as separate tributaries to the head of the Gulf of California.] [See text entries: "Coral River, in New Mexico, runs a course W by S, and empties into the head of the gulf of California, close by the mouth of the Colerado river (sic)" (ENTIRE ENTRY). "Pedro, St. a town of New Mexico, on the S side of Coral River, near the confluence of that river with the Colorado. The united stream runs a short way S, and falls into the N part of the Gulf of California." (ENTIRE ENTRY). The text entry for "River of the West" is the Columbia River, which is labeled on the map "R. Oregon Columbia" (sic). The text entry for "Oregon River" (sic) reads, "See River of the West", which is a superficial entry; and even though there is a separate entry for "Columbia, a large river of the NW coast . . .", the geographic coordinates differ for the Pacific Ocean mouths of the Columbia and the River of the West. (Although the "R. Colorado " in "Louisiana" [territory, now Texas] is noted on the map, there is no text entry.)) [The 2nd ed. was in 1804; not seen for this bibliography.]

"Brazil is a wonderful place—the air is so fine, the sky so blue, and the scenery like Japanese scenery. In the United States and Europe the trees are all the same. If there is pine, everything is pine; if there are firs, everything is fir, but in South America there are varieties of vegetable life. The rocks are like Japanese rocks. They are not so grand as the Grand Canyon rocks or the Yosemite rocks, but there is more moss, and they are more beautiful to the Japanese tastes. So I think Japanese people should go to South American countries." [See pp. 18-19, summary for Clark County in the section, "Review of Highway Construction Carried On During the Biennium in the Various Counties"; regarding construction of bridges over the Virgin River. Also note: "One of the most important improvements was the construction of 22.71 miles of bituminous treated gravel surfaced highway between Las Vegas and Boulder City. This section of road carries an extremely heavy amount of travel, averaging 1,500 cars a day, and it has been necessary to augment the oil treated gravel surface with an asphaltic wearing surface. This latter work will be completed about the 15th of October, 1932." (pp. 18-19)]

Eloquently writes Mrs. [John D.] Sherman: 'I know of the inspiration that comes from a climb to the summit of Long's Peak in the new Rocky Mountain Park. I have stood on the glacier at timber line on the breast of noble, snow-crowned Mount Rainier. From Glacier Point I have seen the alluring beauty of Yosemite Valley. Standing on the rim of Crater Lake I have looked down into the depths of that marvelous blue water and I have felt the wondrous mystery of the Grand Cañon. To me these scenic wonderlands are no longer in the Far West, but with me, wherever I may go—an ever-present inspiration.'"] |

Accordion-fold production of ten panels, affixed to boards, with quotations from John Wesley Powell, Aldo Leopold, Nancy and Roger Kayser, and Donna and Peter Thomas. "50 copies for Donna's 50th birthday" (recto of accordion-fold leaf). WorldCat notes from a bookseller's description, which helps identify this production : "Brown paper covered boards varnished to look like wood with paper label on front board."; "The paper is 'duplex', or two sided: the sheet is off white, shaded with umber pigment, and the back has a layer of darker paper pulp with petroglyph-like imagery onlaid over the surface. It was printed with a red brown rainbow roll, so the ink is subtly shaded from the top of the page to the bottom, an attempt to visually allude to the colors of the Grand Canyon. Both the front and the back of the accordion page are printed with imagery that depicts the elevations of the Grand Canyon. This image is a duplication from one of the original technical drawing[s] from Powell's book." [Additional remarks by E.E.S.: Front board with paste-down illustration repeating a detail from the accordion-fold illustrations, on which is affixed in turn a paste-down title, "THE GRAND CANYON". The "petroglyph-like imagery" of the rear board comprises a few block letters, largely undecipherable. The graphical reproduction of the recto and verso of the accordion fold are details, |

Овај кањон јесте леп, али то је кањон у пустињи кроз који протиче мутна река Колорадо. Са друге стране, Србија има кањон Лима, кањон Таре и многе друге кањоне који су много лепши од кањона Колорадо, који се налазе у предивној природи пуној зеленила, и кроз које протичу реке чија се вода може пити као са најчистијег извора." [The Colorado Canyon in America is visited by more than 4 million tourists every year and is the most visited natural site in the world. This canyon is beautiful, but it is a canyon in the desert through which the muddy Colorado River flows. On the other hand, Serbia has the Lima canyon, the Tara canyon and many other canyons that are much more beautiful than the Colorado canyon, which are located in beautiful nature full of greenery, and through which rivers flow whose water can be drunk as from the purest source.]] [In Serbian.]

[See pp. 131-132: "I have often wondered who would write a poem worthy of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado. Vachel Lindsay is the only living American who could do it, and I hope he will accept this challenge. Its awful majesty can be revealed only in verse; for it is one of the very few wonders of the world which no photograph and no painting can ever reproduce. Who ever saw a picture that gave him any conception of this incomparable spectacle?"] [Lindsay seems not to have accepted the challenge.]

1870, 1871, and 1872, under the direction of the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution.* Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 291 pp., map and river profile on two sheets laid in. [U.S. 43rd Congress, 1st Session, House Miscellaneous Document 300, Serial 1622.] [This volume is traditionally cited as by Powell. Powell's name not on title-page, but appears on the next leaf, p. [III], "Report of J. W. Powell", with the report following on pp. [i]-xi, 1-214 (p. [i] is a letter of transmittal from Joseph Henry to J. G. Blaine, Speaker of the House of Representatives). Chapter 10 (pp. 133-145) is "Report on a trip to the mouth of the Dirty Devil River", by A[Imon]. H[arris]. Thompson, which is extralimital to the region covered by this bibliography. "Part Third, Zoology (pp. 215-285), by Elliott Coues, contains two papers related only partly to the Colorado River region, and a third paper communicated to Coues by G. Brown Goode, "Notes on the 'Salamander' of Florida (Geomys tuza)", which is not pertinent to this bibliography.] [Two sheets are laid in:
1) map, "Green River from the Union Pacific Rail Road to the Mouth of White River.
1873" (scale 1 inch = 4 miles) (extralimital to the region covered by this bibliography;
this map is WHEAT V:1261); 2) "Profile of the Green River and Colorado River of the West From the crossing of the U.P.R.R. to the mouth of the Colorado, compared with the Profile of the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers From Pittsburg to Vicksburg" (horizontal scale 1 inch = 40 miles, vertical scale 1 inch = 2000 feet).] [NOTE: Poore, p. 1021, gives a publication date of June 16, 1874, which is two days earlier than Henry's letter of transmitted and which may be the date ordered to be printed. ► Poore, Benjamin
