PERIODICALS AND SERIALS CITED

THIS LIST ITEMIZES 12,064 titles of periodicals and serial publications cited in THE GRAND CANON. If anything, it certifies the extent of international interest and attention to the Grand Canyon and the Colorado River, specifically as recorded through these media. Titles listed are principally those cited in THE GRAND CANON Volume 1/Part B (Bibliography) but include a few that appear in Volume 2 (Cartobibliography).

That a title appears in the list does not imply that the entire series has been examined; in fact, this is rarely the case. Almost all titles are added to the bibliography opportunistically; many serial titles are limited to single or a few citations. However, some principal serials that relate almost exclusively to the Grand Canyon and the Colorado River have been canvassed in their entirety; for example (but not limited to), Boatman's Quarterly Review, Canyon Views, Colorado Plateau Advocate, The Confluence, Grand Canyon Footprints, Grand Canyon Nature Notes, O'Pioneer/The Ol' Pioneer, Plateau, and The Waiting List. Titles of older inkprint serials that have been examined only from digital copies posted to the web are listed, although their complete runs have not necessarily been seen (for example, the Santa Fe Railway's employees' journal, Santa Fe Magazine, earlier known as Santa Fe Employes' [sic] Magazine). As a rule, serials are cited in this bibliography only if they are issued no more frequently than weekly; there are a few "daily" exceptions, such as the United States' Federal Register and The New York Times.

Titles are listed here in the format used by this bibliography. Awkward titles are as used by the organization or agency that published the serial. For titles that are a house organ that incorporates the name of the institution, organization, or agency within the serial title, the name of the originating entity usually appears first, followed by the series name, much in the way the titles will be found in most library catalogues. For example:

Proceedings of the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia is cited as

Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia, *Proceedings*⁸³

⁸³ This style has become less customary in some digital catalogs, which now (although not always) list titles faithfully word by word—this despite that titles when so alphabetically ordered do not present a contiguous record of organizational sources, at least within that database field. Compounding that, many libraries do not catalog their serial holdings under multiple variant titles, thus they do not necessarily follow all changes in titles or the names of parties responsible for the serials. As noted in the introductory matter to this volume, all titles are cited in this bibliography as they

Capitalization of words in serial titles is done according to English or American styles for proper names, not usually in the styles of the original languages that sometimes employ lowercase initials for various principal words (for example, in French, the adjective belge that in English is Belgian).

The list that follows is in strict alphabetical order, with the exception that leading definite articles are not alphabetized. Leading definite articles that appear in this bibliography are “The” and non-English equivalents “A” [in Hungarian], “Das”, “De”, “Den”, “Der”, “Det”, “Die”, “El”, “Het”, “Il”, “L’”, “La”, “Le”, “Les”, “O”, “Su”, “Tα” or “To” [Greek “Ta” or “To”], “W”, and “Y”.⁸⁴

If a serial has a multilingual title, and one of them is also in English, the English title is usually preferred in this list of periodicals and serials, with the other title(s) cross-referenced to it (usually indicated by “=”). If a title is in non-Latin orthography, it is listed according to its transliteration, with its English translation (if determined) cross-referenced to it. Cross-listings are not enumerated and thus do not artificially inflate the total serial count.

For titles that change over time, individual citations in THE GRAND CANON reflect titles at the times of publication. Differences in spelling or variant uses of hyphens also reflect contemporary uses of a serial’s name, as cited. The master list that follows notes these differences.

Explanatory information, when deemed necessary for clarity—such as a means to further identify the creator of a more obscure serial, to note the place of publication of a little-known serial, or to distinguish among multiple identical serial titles—is given in (colored parenthetical italics). (The use of color is only a convenience for those who use this work in its original format, and italics so that this information will still stand out if a non-color reproduction is used.)

appeared on the issues being cited, thus they do track variant names over time. Given the legacy of the profuse variation of styles of citation in the published literature, the citation style noted above is retained. Further, this bibliography was begun in this format five decades ago. Retrofitting its more than 111,000 citations, for any reason, would be a prodigious task of uncertain usefulness, especially given that subtle differences between citations would make it impossible to employ a simple global digital search-and-replace process.

⁸⁴ The non-English leading definite articles listed here reflect only those that appear in the periodical and serial titles cited in this bibliography. An exception to the exclusion of the leading definite article in alphabetizing this list is the serial El Palacio, which borrows the name of El Palacio Real de Santa Fé, the historical capitol of colonial Spanish government in Santa Fe, New Mexico, U.S.A.

PERIODICALS AND SERIALS CITED IN THE GRAND CANON

Numerals in the left column are counters only for convenience; they are not a permanent registration of these serial titles nor are there any cross-references to them. The numbers continually change as new titles are added to this list; thus this particular number sequence appears only in the present edition of THE GRAND CANON.
