PRESCIENT WONDERS

Other planets, indeed, may have one such among them, or it seems they should have; but two is enough for an infinite scheme—one for angels, somewhere—and one for men, in Arizona.

—S. L. McKee

Comment in The Grand Canyon of Arizona : Being a Book of Words From Many Pens . . .
(Santa Fe Passenger Department, 1906), p. 117

We now take the Grand Cañon for granted. Only a multiplied and highly supplemented Grand Cañon in Mars or somewhere else could astonish us.

—Alexander Black

The Latest Thing and Other Things
(Harper and Brothers, New York and London, 1922), p. 291

The astonishing Valles Marineris, which dwarfs the Grand Canyon, was discovered on Mars during the 1971–1972 Mariner 9 orbiter mission to the planet. It is often referred to by the sobriquet, “Grand Canyon of Mars,” though its origin is very different from that of Arizona’s canyon. Nevertheless, Earth has the Grand Canyon!

“Global mosaic of 102 Viking 1 Orbiter images of Mars taken on orbit 1334, 22 February 1980. The images are projected into point perspective, representing what a viewer would see from a spacecraft at an altitude of 2,500 km [1553 miles]. At center is Valles Marineris, over 3000 km [1864 miles] long and up to 8 km [5 miles] deep.” (National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Viking 1 Orbiter, MG07S078-334SP.)

Naming the Grand Canyon

The origin of the name “Grand Canyon” is unknown. It was not the neological invention of John Wesley Powell in 1869, as is often retold. Earlier in the 19th century it was known as “Big Canyon” and “Great Canyon,” perhaps the translation of the term by which French-speaking mountain men may have described it—un grand cañon. Both appellations inattentively survived the coming of “Grand Canyon,” but only for a couple of decades. The earliest known non-Indigenous term, Puerto de Bucareli, was conferred in the diary of the Franciscan friar Francisco Garcés when he visited the Havasupai people in 1776, the first non-Native person known to have reached the Grand Canyon since a party of Spanish conquistadores arrived on the rim 236 years earlier, in 1540 (who are not recorded as having given it a name). Ingenious misspellings of the puerto appeared on manuscript and printed maps in the 18th and 19th centuries but its association as Garcés’s mountain pass for the Colorado River was never remembered, nor did it label an entire canyon. The origins for each “Canyon” name, though, remain mysteries, including the first known appearance of “Grand Canyon” in 1857 that disappointingly lacked an admission of neologism or credit to another source. This has not dissuaded travelers and writers from exploiting the name for other landscapes around the world or from exercising it in a superfluity of analogies and metaphors. In the end, an answer to the question, “Who named the Grand Canyon?” may be unessential, given that Native peoples have had words from time immemorial that affirm long spiritual and cultural associations with the canyon.

GRAND CANYON : COLOSSAL MIRROR

PREFACE

THIS COMPILATION is the product of several decades' work in tandem with the Grand Canyon–Lower Colorado River bibliography that was begun in 1974. The search for Grand Canyon appellations in their various forms has always been informal, though by the time that the first volume of THE GRAND CANON was produced in 2012 the compilation was inserted as an appendix therein, with the title, “The Biggest Mirror”. The 2nd and 3rd editions of THE GRAND CANON (2015, 2019) included updated versions of that appendix. In January 2021, I introduced a further revised version as a separate offering on the Raven’s Perch Media website (<https://ravensperch.org>), there with the new title, “Colossal Mirror”. I intended at that time to occasionally update it on the website.

In March 2021 I created the Cartobibliography of the Grand Canyon and Lower Colorado River Regions that is Volume 2 of THE GRAND CANON. In September 2021 I decided to make the Colossal Mirror its own volume as well. Thus, THE GRAND CANON now comprises the introduction and principal bibliography, the cartobibliography, and this nomenclatural compendium; all integral parts of the Grand Canyon–Lower Colorado River bibliography project that is now in its 50th year. The three volumes of this release are uniformly dated 2025. I retain documentary file copies of all items that are listed in Volume 3.

Regarding the Catalogers’ Note on the publisher’s page (or copyright page) (see it here), I am astonished to have felt the need to add it—it’s unheard of, I think. It points out that the word “canon”, which is conveniently the same in both English and Spanish, can mean a standard, or authoritative, list. The word is neither “cañón” nor “canyon”.¹ Even in the short introductory life of THE GRAND CANON the series title had been made into The Grand Canyon in several libraries’ catalogs; I do not know whether by inattention, unfamiliarity with the word by individual catalogers, or by procedurally romanizing a “foreign” word (which it is not, nor is it pronounced like “canyon”). And the bibliography has been cited by authors who have introduced “Canyon” for Canon. Among librarians and researchers, at least, it should not happen. I hope it is not an expression of careless or oblivious neoacademics. Perhaps now literarily defiant, I stand by this precise title, one purposely whimsical. As I note in the Preamble in Volume 1:

“Bibliography” is, honestly, an awful word. If one is directed to a bibliography but is not otherwise an enthusiast of, or at least appreciates, them, a common response is impatience, if not evasion. Even the suffix “-ography” is a turn-off to some people. If only there were another term, one less dull, one that promises interesting engagement. Some bibliographies are minor contrivances; others are monumentally important within their scope. Some are spectacularly unimaginative presentations that promise tedium or quick disinterest; others are beauties of layout, typography and binding that lure in their users. Yet they all use the same term. If one bibliography were to stand out for its purposes, if it promises to be tremendously comprehensive, it might as well be called a canon. Thus, the name for THE GRAND CANON follows on this theme—and it plays on the mostly nineteenth century, Spanish-influenced typography that spelled the world’s Grand Canyon as “Grand Canon”. (In non-Spanish language publications, it appeared widely with or without the n’s cedilla, virtually never with the o’s accute accent.²) Despite some earlier

² The word “cañon” and its Anglicized “canyon” were long in use in the American Southwest, in print as early as the 1840s, borrowing the local Spanish term for valleys of exceptional proportions; see more as summarized in Spamer, “The Canyon Grand By Any Other Name”, Nature Notes (Grand Canyon attempts to avoid it, I concede to having to use the word “bibliography”, at least in the subtitle, so that users and librarians will recognize it as such; and hopefully they will see the canon in it. THE GRAND CANON, with its dreaded “B” word, may as well aspire to some whimsy.

National Park), Vol. 13, no. 1 (Spring 1997), pp. 7-9. Also note that as one searches for early instances of “Grand Canyon,” numerous items will be found in French-language sources from around 1860. These, however, all refer to discussions or reports that cite the Ives expedition’s findings or the published Report of 1861, which translate Ives’ “Big Cañon” into French as “Grand Cañon,” thus in these instances the phrase cannot be construed to be early uses of the Americanized Grand Canyon name.

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

AS A WORLD WONDER, the nominal attribute, “Grand Canyon”, has been copied and rephrased for hundreds of other locales the world over, and on other celestial bodies. In some fashion formally, or far more often informally, these places are called “The Grand Canyon”, the “Grand Canyon of” a certain place, and variously as “another” Grand Canyon of one sort or another. Occasionally there even are “grander” and “littler” Grand Canyons. A majority of the listings here are extracted from the ephemeral postings of internet websites; the remainder appear in conventional publications. These comprise a unique perspective of the extenuating powers of impression that the Grand Canyon has held ever since the first “other” Grand Canyon was named (the Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone, in 1870).

“Who named the Grand Canyon?” has been a recurring question for more than a century, but the truth is that this person still has not been discovered.³ The Colorado River’s “Grand Canyon” was first labeled by that name by Lorin Blodget in his Climatology of the United States (Philadelphia, 1857); this was twelve years before John Wesley Powell’s first Colorado River trip and even before Joseph C. Ives debarked for the mouth of the Colorado River later in 1857. Even though Ives’s party was the first true exploring expedition to purposely reach the Grand Canyon, in 1858, they knew it only as “Big Cañon” and “the Great Cañon”. Blodget did not specify whether he obtained the Grand name from somewhere or if was his neological improvement over “big” and “great”.⁴

Grand Canyon’s name realistically awaited John Wesley Powell, who brought “Grand Canyon” into the collective consciousness and literature of the world just before, during and after his widely followed first expedition through the canyons. Though Powell began using the Grand name prior to his 1869 trip, he did not indicate that he had gotten it from somewhere, nor in fact did he ever take credit for it, even though he reported in his celebrated travelogues that he and his crew named other canyons of the Green and Colorado Rivers. When they had finally arrived at Grand Canyon, it already had a name. On the other hand, Frederick S. Dellenbaugh, the teenaged member of Powell’s second expedition of 1871–1872, who also worked with Powell on the first maps produced of the Grand Canyon region, gave Powell all the credit for the name (though it should be kept in mind that Dellenbaugh idolized Powell all his life). He mistakenly said Powell gave the canyon its name after the conclusion of the first expedition, and he (Dellenbaugh) was proud to recollect that it was he who was the first to ink the name on a map, during the Kanab layover of the second expedition. Unfortunately, to this day people say Powell named the Grand, simply because he was for years, and remains, the hero–explorer of the Colorado.

Moreover, the Grand Canyon’s overwhelming attraction to comparison is wealthily displayed in the associative, meditative, and creative traditions of analogy and metaphor; a separate listing herein itemizes many examples, likewise from published literature but chiefly from web-posted material. I believe that it is imperative to capture these numerous geographical and literary uses, at least in summary form, particularly from the ephemeral postings of the web. Each conveys the concept of a canyon; but specially for all of them, the measure is The Grand Canyon—and no other canyon than the one in Arizona!

These borrowings are like a musical canon that has a melody and repeated imitations of it. In also extracting concepts of the physical and conceptual Grand Canyon for other applications, each example in these literary compilations is a hyponym to the real Grand Canyon that is their hypernym. The number of places and phrases recorded here dramatically emphasize the tremendous attraction that the Grand Canyon has had on people since 1870 when the first “other” Grand Canyon was named after it. Most examples are informal, yet they have been used and thus they should be accounted for as a matter of literary and intellectual record. This is effectively a documentary record of the creative work of a very large number of people.

Even so, despite the details of the extensive lists that follow herein, there is but one unavoidable detail: Arizona is home to “the one and only really Grand Canyon.”⁵

⁵ Anonymous, “Radium in the Grand Canyon,” Engineering and Mining Journal, Vol. 111, no. 8 (February 19, 1921), p. 335.

This name has been repeatedly infringed for purposes of advertisement. The cañon of the Yellowstone has been called ‘The Grand Cañon.’ A more flagrant piracy is the naming of the gorge of the Arkansas River in Colorado ‘The Grand Cañon of Colorado,’ and many persons who have visited it have been persuaded that they have seen the great chasm. These river valleys are certainly very pleasing and picturesque, but there is no more comparison between them and the mighty chasm of the Colorado River than there is between the Alleghenies or Trosachs and the Himalayas.

—Clarence Edward Dutton*

One, of course, is always called upon to compare this Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone with the Grand Canyon, that of the Colorado, in Arizona When Grand Canyon without the suffix is spoken of, government literature tells us that is meant. There are numerous Grand Canyons, but they all have a suffix.

GRAND CANYON : COLOSSAL MIRROR

INTRODUCTION TO SECTION 1: ALL THE OTHER GRAND CANYONS

AS A WONDER OF THE WORLD (FIRST, SEVENTH, EIGHTH OR OTHER), the Grand Canyon of the Colorado River in Arizona is the source of nomenclature, copied and rephrased, for hundreds of other features on all seven of Earth's continents, in the oceans, and on celestial bodies. All of these names have appeared in print or in digital form in internet sources. Formally and (far more usually) informally, these places are called in some fashion "Grand Canyon". One may argue that the focus on other nomenclatural Grand Canyons is more sensibly left only to those that have been formally named or that have appeared in "proper" literature—published, in the conventional sense, discussionary at least, even officially sanctioned by registorial bodies. But as the geographical roll-call here demonstrates, the Grand Canyon has inspired imagination and infatuation in abundance, worldwide, for a long time. It is these neologists (whomever they are, however widely read or not) who have seen the Grand Canyon shaped in some other place. Virtually all of the 1,304 geographically applied names listed here convey some sort of branding or that are simply the literary whims of writers; rarely in any sense are they geographically official.⁶

"Which Grand Canyon?" might be a surprising question given that virtually everyone "knows" about the one Grand Canyon in Arizona. Yet in various issues of National Park Journal, an annual commercial production, the question is meant to force the reader to decide whether to visit the national park's South Rim or Grand Canyon West on the Hualapai Indian Reservation. There is as well, a bit confusingly, "the four sides of Grand Canyon," comprising North Rim, South Rim, Grand Canyon West, and Havasu Falls—

⁶ Due to the prevalence of variant names for some places, this figure does not represent a tally of unique places that carry the Grand Canyon marque. Many places noted in the nomenclator will show variant names for one locale. Some places, listed separately, may be unknowingly the same as another place listed in the nomenclator. Completely detailed geographical research has thus far not been possible. (See also special remarks with the People's Republic of China.)

though the last three all are on one side of the canyon—the South—from which at a distance is “The Other Rim: North Rim” that somehow confirms the south side’s singular reputation. But as we see here, attempts to pigeon-hole the Grand Canyon fail. With few exceptions, principally those listed in official geographical nomenclators or in the promotional literature of chambers of commerce, the listings that appear here have in no way implied themselves to be official, sanctioned, widely accepted, or for that matter even known to most people. Most of these listings are only cultural and impressionistic labels.

Not including Arizona’s Grand Canyon of the Colorado River, there are 120 places thus far found that are labeled just “Grand Canyon”, albeit a couple of them are parodies (nevertheless the geographical meaning is implied!). Even more carry names with possessive qualifiers; and some are qualified by quotation marks as “Grand Canyon” thus are in some measure analogous terms, but each nomenclatorial instance is scored separately here to accommodate the usages of original sources. If a possessive qualifier is affixed, like the “Grand Canyon of ~”, a whopping 704 more appear; or if the qualifier appears as “~’s Grand Canyon”, add another 95; and if the adjective qualifiers “-an” or “-ian” appear, the tally increases by 34.

Among these “Grand Canyon”s bury 35 that are features inside caves. Predictably, some are the “Underground Grand Canyon,” “Grand Canyon underground,” or “subterranean Grand Canyon”; but (hold your breath) there are four “Underwater Grand Canyon” locales in the world’s seas, too. Then, five Grand Canyons have been identified in the geological subsurface, invisible to the human eye.⁷ As clandestine as all these features might be, keep watch in the open for the “Hidden Grand Canyon of India”.

⁷ None should be confused with the outright “invisible Grand Canyon on the ocean floor” (Monterey Canyon, off the coast of California, listed in the Analogies section of this volume)—though how its presence is known in the first place is not explained.

GRAND CANYON : COLOSSAL MIRROR

As for the qualified analagous term, “Grand Canyon” in quotes—seemingly unable to fully commit grandeur—there are 9 in the nomenclator herein, and more that are a “Grand Canyon” (in quotes) with a geographical placeholder appended.

There are 49 places that carry the name “Little Grand Canyon” (and 24 more Little Grand Canyons that have possessive qualifiers like “Little Grand Canyon of ~”, and so forth); to these little features add three more that are in caves. Not to be belittled, a “miniature” or “mini” Grand Canyon appears 3 times; and if you can spy them there are also a “sub-miniature” one, a “micro” one, a “mini-micro Grand Canyon”, and two that are “Grand Canyon in miniature”. One should be attuned, too, to the “piccolo Grand Canyon” (in Italy, appropriately). While there are also three “small Grand Canyons”, one must wonder where the “Not-So-Grand Canyon” falls on this modestly grand scale.

All in the family, there are two “Junior Grand Canyons”, three “Baby Grand Canyons”, and five places that are “Grand Canyon’s little brother” or similar moniker. To fill out the family there are two “sisters” and four “little sisters”—even “the Grand Canyon’s uncle...twice removed” [sic]. “The Grand Canyon’s father” is two miles deep, but it is unattainable because it is only in the spiritual experience of “Xorkoth”, who fights long-term opiate addiction. For those who wonder where “mother” is, they will have to find her, too, only among the metaphors, where the Grand Canyon is the “mother of all grand things” and at the same time is “the grandfather of all canyons”.

The nomenclatural record-holder for geographically tagged Grand Canyons is the “Grand Canyon of the East”: 16 locales carry that nominal term, 13 in the United States (four of them in New York State alone), and one each in Canada, India, and the People’s Republic of China—albeit for the Chinese examples “East” is to be read differently (synonymous with Orient even though there also are 2 “Grand Canyon of the Orient” and 2 “Oriental Grand Canyon” canyons). These do not include two U.S. locales that each are “Grand Canyon East”—one is in Kentucky, the second is given to the eastern portion of the Grand Canyon in Arizona. Then, immixing the eastern-end Grand Canyon, there is the “east rim of the Grand Canyon”, but it labels Horseshoe Bend, which is in Glen Canyon near Page, Arizona!

There is “Grand Canyon West,” a tourist-drawing locale on the Hualapai Indian Reservation that opened in 1988. It’s the commercially advertised place so very familiar now to millions of visitors to Las Vegas, Nevada, that implies it is the focus of Grand Canyon, showcased by its Grand Canyon Skywalk (a looped glass bridge that does not bridge the canyon after all). Grand Canyon West is also where daily helicopter flights take hundreds of tourists “to the bottom” of the canyon, landing on helipads near the Colorado River on the reservation’s boundary; some are specially marketed as “champagne flights” direct from Vegas to this implied extension of Nevada. Long before Grand Canyon West, the long-overlooked western part of the canyon had once been called “Arizona’s lost canyon”.⁸ (There is also a “‘Grand Canyon’ of the West”—on Grand Canary Island, in the eastern Atlantic Ocean of all places.)

Two places are “another Grand Canyon”, and 16 places are the “Other Grand Canyon”. Thrown in for good measure are “America’s Other Grand Canyon”, “Arizona’s Other Grand Canyon”, and “Mexico’s other Grand Canyon”.

There is the solidly enumerated “Grand Canyon—II,” but, rebuffing arithmetic, a “second Grand Canyon” is so far found in five different places in the world. Accordingly, Arizona’s grand canyon must be in first place; witness also two places in the world that are differentially the “answer to the Grand Canyon” (one in Denmark, the other in Norway).

⁸ Russell K. Grater, “Arizona’s lost canyon”, Arizona Highways, Vol. 30, no. 3 (March 1954), pp. 32-35. Before “Grand Canyon West” there was thought of reserving the area on the Hualapai Indian Reservation for the dark-sky uses of avocational astronomers (Stephen James O’Meara, “Resort to the Stars” in “Amateur Astronomers” section, Sky and Telescope, Vol. 76, no. 6 (December 1988), pp. 681-683.

GRAND CANYON : COLOSSAL MIRROR

But which is “grandest”? Arizona’s canyon is ascertively the “Great Grand Canyon” and “Grandest of all Canyons”.⁹ Fair enough; yet the Baranca del Cobre in Mexico has been styled the “grandest of the Grand Canyons”. Contrarily, “The Grandest Canyon” is Valles Marineris—on Mars. Yet still there is “Grand Canyon, the grandest of all the grand ones” (of course, but it turns out to be the claim of the Royal Gorge of the Arkansas River in Colorado, not the middling Arizona one). Then, all alone, is the “Second Grandest Canyon”—Palo Duro Canyon in Texas, which is the “Grand Canyon of Texas,” too, and secondarily the “Grandest Canyon in Texas”.

Some canyons come out fighting. Seven of them claim the title of “Grander Canyon”. One even has been labeled, jealously, the “original Grand Canyon”.¹⁰ And then in Spain there’s one that, at long as it’s at it, arrogates the Colorado River as well—there, Río Gor’s canyon is the “Grand Canyon of the Spanish Colorado”.

Novelly, the Grand Canyon was unwittingly renamed, with a straight face, “Fabulous Gully” in a thesaurus-wielding Artificial Intelligence-produced book generated about the floods of 1983 on the “Colorado Stream” and “Colorado Waterway”.¹¹ AI needs more credibility.

Unrealistically, there are five “real” Grand Canyons. Even Arizona’s honestly real Grand Canyon has a separate, promotionally pronounced “real” portion to it. This implies that there is a less-real portion!—

⁹ The Grand Canyon is also indecisively the “king of canyons” and “queen of canyons”, as listed in the Analogies section of this volume.

¹¹ James B. Cole [supposedly], Rising Waters : the untold story of the 1983 Colorado River flood. [No imprint, 2024], 294 pp. [An AI-produced book where, despite the title, in the text the river is the “Colorado Stream” and the “Colorado Waterway”.]

somewhere.¹² Then we are presented with a conundrum: the question has been posed, “Which Grand Canyon is the real Grand Canyon?” which turns out to be a coin toss between the South and North Rims of the national park and the “West Rim” at the Hualapai Tribe’s Grand Canyon Skywalk.¹³

There is also a part of Arizona’s gulf that philosophically insists that even in the midst of such multifarious grandeur there is a “‘quintessential’ Grand Canyon.”¹⁴

THE Grand Canyon—Arizona’s main one—is condescendingly acknowledged as the “Other Canyon” in an item about Oak Creek Canyon, suggesting that the monstrous gape to its north is but “another” canyon whose name should not be mentioned in company.¹⁵ More directly disparaged, Arizona’s big canyon is called, with a sniff, “that other Grand Canyon”, so noted in a piece that promotes Pine Creek Gorge, a place otherwise enviously and widely advertised as the “Grand Canyon of Pennsylvania”. Then there is the “Other Grand Canyon of the East” that distracts one to the Genesee River in New York State, where Letchworth State Park brandishes this other canyon that even carries eleven more synonyms to make the point. Perhaps a bit confusingly, there is, too, “The other Grand Canyon” that metaphorically labels the Havasupai world of Havasu Canyon, the flip side of the national park bustle,¹⁶ while, coincidentally, Havasu

¹⁴ Then there are sites that attempt to strip away the canyon’s very own quintessentiality. For example, the one-time home of Elvis Presley in Memphis, Tennessee, is a temptor of tourists who might fly in from Atlanta, Georgia: “Graceland . . . is, with apologies to the Grand Canyon, perhaps the quintessential American landmark.” (“Dream Weekends,” Atlanta [October 2004, p. 83].)

Canyon is “The B side of Grand Canyon”.¹⁷ But if the (or any) Grand Canyon, or a part of it, can’t conveniently be gotten to, the substitute “mimic Grand Canyon” may suffice.¹⁸

Despite the sidesteps of other and mimicking Grand Canyons, it is impossible to not acknowledge that it is THE Grand Canyon which surpasses their imitative notoriety. It is splendidly the de facto trademark of The Grand Canyon State (Arizona’s official nickname); as such we may infer from the state’s promotional literature that the canyon is the official Grand Canyon.¹⁹

The Grand Canyon of the Colorado River may be the literary fount of ersatz Grand Canyons, but it is not the first place to be named “Grand Canyon”—not even in Arizona.²⁰ Forgotten they may be (and should ²⁰ “Grand Canon” appeared in Andrew B. Gray’s 1855 record of a survey for the Texas Western Railroad (Southern Pacific Railroad) across the south of New Mexico Territory (which embraced today’s Arizona). This name was used for a defile in the Chiricahua Mountains (southeastern Arizona), although whether the name was newly applied or one locally used was not indicated. A lithograph illustrating this canyon was added to an 1856 reprinting of the survey—“Grand Canon. Mountains of Chiricahui, opposite Head Springs Valle de Sauz Cienega.” This is the first illustration of any place labeled as Grand Canyon. So Arizona’s first Grand Canyon wasn’t even the one on the Colorado River! One might argue that Gray’s “Grand Canon” was only the generic description of “a grand canyon”, the name perhaps editorially capitalized being in a figure legend, but his text refers to it as a specific geographic feature, with initial capital letters, even once calling it (with definite article and italics) “the Grand Canon”. (Gray, A. B., Texas Western Railroad. Survey of Route, its Cost and Probable Revenue, in Connection with the Pacific Railway; Nature of the Country, Climate, Mineral and Agricultural Resources, &c. (Cincinnati: Porter, Thrall and Chapman, 1855); “Grand Canon”, see pp. 47, 48. Reprinted and slightly revised, with illustrations added: Gray; A. B., Southern Pacific Railroad. Survey of a Route for the Southern Pacific R R, on the 32nd Parallel, by A. B. Gray, for the Texas Western R R Company (Cincinnati: Wrightson and Co.’s (‘Railroad Record:’) Print., 1856); “Grand Canon,” see pp. 48, 49, illustration facing p. 48.) be), it is the name of the singular chasm of the Colorado that has been copied ever since John Wesley Powell got off the river in 1869, when celebratory acknowledgments of his first “Grand Canyon” expedition reached readers of newspapers, magazines, and books worldwide, readers who would literarily craft grand canyons of their own, somewhere. Almost immediately, in 1870, the first of what was to be hundreds of aspirant, suffixed Grand Canyons was named—the Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone.²¹ But as noted in the General Introduction to the present volume, the first known published use of the Arizona Grand Canyon’s name was in 1857, but who named it as such is still unknown.²²

Named the Grand Canyon?’—and Other Obscure Grand Canyon ‘Firsts’”. The Ol’ Pioneer (Grand Canyon Historical Society), Vol. 24, no. 2 (Spring 2013), pp. 4-16.]

- ²¹ The name of the “Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone” is attributed to Henry D. Washburn. During the expedition led by Washburn and Gustavus C. Doane to the Yellowstone region in 1870, numerous Yellowstone features were given names by which they are famously known today, although the “Yellowstone” suffix to Grand Canyon was added later. The Yellowstone’s famous canyon was just called “the Grand Canyon”. Lee Whittlesley’s Yellowstone Place Names (Montana Historical Society, Helena, 1988, p. 119), attributes the Yellowstone’s Grand Canyon to Washburn but without any indication whether the Grand Canyon of Arizona influenced the Yellowstone name; nor apparently did the explorers make any such indication. An account of the expedition published by Washburn in the Helena Herald mentions “the Grand Cañon”. That newspaper record was reprinted, without noting the date, in Rossiter W. Raymond’s “Mining Statistics West of the Rocky Mountains” (U.S. 42nd Congress, 1st Session, House Executive Document 10, 1871, p. 214). Doane’s own report first mentions “the Grand Cañon” in his diary entry for August 29, 1870 (“The report of Lieutenant Gustavus C. Doane upon the so-called Yellowstone Expedition of 1870”, U.S. 41st Congress, 3rd Session, Senate Executive Document 51, 1871, p. 9). Nathaniel Pitt Langford’s diary of the Washburn–Doane expedition first notes “the Grand cañon” in his entry for August 26, 1870 (Diary of the Washburn Expedition to the Yellowstone and Firehole Rivers in the year 1870, privately printed, 1905, p. 16). Thomas Moran’s monumental canvas, The Grand Cañon of the Yellowstone (1871–1872) was developed from studies he made in Yellowstone that could be the original source of, if not otherwise inspired by, Washburn and Doane’s neology. Notably, Moran did not use the (Arizona) Grand Canyon’s name for his equally large canvas, “The Chasm of the Colorado” (1873). Not only would the name have conflicted with his earlier work, but it seems that by then everyone understood that the Colorado River’s chasm was “the” Grand Canyon, with no suffix. The paintings were purchased by the U.S. Government, each for $10,000, which originally were hung in the U.S. Capitol and later transferred to the Department of the Interior. They are now displayed in the Smithsonian Institution’s National Gallery of Art, Washington.

GRAND CANYON : COLOSSAL MIRROR

The compendium that follows herein contains the names of geographical, artificial, and imaginary features that apply the epithet “Grand Canyon”. Formal and informal, current and archaic, names are listed. By far most of these names are off-the-cuff descriptive terms; few are legalized by official administrative actions. These nomenclatural expressions are taken from published literature and mass-produced sources like postcards, but a substantial number of them are from internet websites; all document broad literary and imaginative applications of the term. Whereas anyone may hereafter add to this list by simply including it in (for example) a published essay, letter to an editor, printed postcard, or website posting, the names listed here are those that appeared without any such encouragement, already in place for the finding. The list represents undirected, unreined creativity, without the temptation to invent new “Grand Canyon” terms simply for the sake of adding to the list. Perhaps, here the list should end to save it from purposed phrasing.

One will notice that some of the items listed are, in lower case, the “grand canyon” of some place, or similarly within quotation marks (“Grand Canyon”). This reflects the usage as presented in the source seen. While one may argue that the description is thus generic, as in “a grand canyon”, it is clear that the nomenclatural correlation is present, and probably the use of “the grand canyon of ~” was meant not so much to compromise the actual Grand Canyon epithet but to avoid the direct use of the name while conveying some same sense of perceived, comparative grandeur.

I pause to note that of these many other Grand Canyons—real, metaphorical or other—none were compared to some other, non-Grand, canyon, but solely to the acme of canyons. When the comparison is made, especially with the outright label of plain “Grand Canyon”, it always emulates “the” Grand Canyon; everyone knows what is meant. (An exception might be made for Japan’s Mount Tomi in Gifu Prefecture, the “Grand Canyon of Gifu”, noticed soberly in an advertisement for a sake producer at the base of the 892-foot mount.)

GRAND CANYON : COLOSSAL MIRROR

Some of the names in this list are nomenclatural synonyms; for example, in Oman, separately listed nomenclatural grand canyons are An Nakhur Gorge, Wadi Nakhr, and Jebel Shams, all of which seem to be one geographical locale. Yet a Grand Canyon appellation has been inscribed with each of these names. Likewise, some names might be listed here with the qualifier that a precise locale was not specified, but which actually may be one of the same features already in this list. Regardless, each use is unique, and such attributions are accorded their own entries because of the variations of nomenclature. A more concisely edited geographical list will have to resolve these minor issues.

Still many more items in this list are the creations of writers through error or as the result of geographical unacquaintance or witlessness. THE Grand Canyon has been misplaced, appearing as the “Grand Canyon of Nevada,” “Grand Canyon of New Mexico,” and the “Great Canyon of California.” Even the “Great Canyon of the Colorado in Sonora” makes the list. Milling about, one Romanian author placed the Grand Canyon only “somewhere in America.”²³

But it was an internationally advertised version of the Arizona canyon misplaced to Colorado that memorably made the news, when a 60-cent international (air mail) commemorative U.S. postage stamp pictured “Grand Canyon, Colorado.” The stamps had not yet been released when the error was identified, and ostensibly all of them (as many as 100 million) were destroyed at the cost of a half million dollars.²⁴ When the corrected version was released, “Grand Canyon, Arizona” (Scott C135, First Day of Issue January

A rudimentary version of the geographical-names list that that is now Grand Canyon: Colossal Mirror was first published in 1996 by pseudonymous authors Early C. Corax and C. V. Abyssus.²⁵ Some sources were originally taken from the U.S. Geological Survey's Geographic Names Information System and from gazetteers published by the Defense Mapping Agency. Since 1996, the list has clearly been vastly expanded from other published sources, from ephemera, and most substantially from internet websites. A somewhat extensive, revised version of the 1996 list was published in 2006, which for visual effect and parody was printed in quite impractically small type.²⁶

Omitted from the organized geographical list are 95 “artificial” Grand Canyons—that is, human-made features or constructions with applied nomenclature—and 20 that are fictional, imaginary, conceptual, or hypothetical. These omitted names appear in their own lists herein.

This exhausting trip around the world through the imaginative exercises of neologists does not end above Earth's atmosphere. We leap into the heavens, where are found Grand Canyons on Venus (a web user had sighted on Venutian radar imagery a huge, Grand Canyon-spanning, alien-made bridge!), Mars (ten of them, not limited to the famous Valles Marineris that dwarfs Earth's canyon and which goes by 12 distinctly different Grand Canyon-centric names), and the moons of Earth (four Grand Canyons on our moon), Uranus (on Titania), and Pluto (on Charon). Stepping even further into the infinite, the engagingly termed “Grand Canyon of Space” was named by an observant web user who found an amusingly errant label on a GoogleSky screen that plotted a space in the heavens as “Grand Canyon, US.”

An Ending Thought

Of the many mirrored Grand Canyons—real, metaphorical or other—none are contrasted to any other than the acme of canyons. Each emulates “the” Grand Canyon; everybody understands the association.²⁷ Yet, curiously, no place seems to have been declared the “ultimate Grand Canyon.” The aggregate content of Grand Canyon: Colossal Mirror can fill this unexpected gap, substantiating that “the one and only really Grand Canyon” is, inescapably, the Ultimate Grand Canyon.

²⁷ There always seems to be an exception; for example, Japan’s Mount Tomi in Gifu Prefecture is soberly named the “Grand Canyon of Gifu” in an advertisement for a sake producer situated at the base of the 892-foot mount.

³³ Some of the "Grand Canyons" in the People's Republic of China are based on publications originally in English translation, whose writers specifically borrowed the name of "the Grand Canyon". Many more instances may derive from literal translations of "great canyon" or similar adjectival terms from the Chinese rather than as a precise comparison to "the Grand Canyon"; and further, some names may be conflated through different or imperfect transliteration schemes. Also, some names in transliteration may actually refer to a metaphorical expression as opposed to a directly geographical name, which have not been ascertained. However, all names found are listed here, from English-language sources and material translated from the Chinese, rather than attempting a subjective analysis of original intent, which in any case is not possible considering that they are largely from such informal sources as web-posted documents.

The Term "Grand Canyon" in Analogy, Metaphor, and Neology

[The Netherlands is to social geography what the Grand Canon is to physical geography, i.e. a great variety of forms and puzzles, harmoniously incorporated in a small space.]

INTRODUCTION TO SECTION 2: ALL THINGS LIKE THE GRAND CANYON

AS WITH geographical reuses of the term “Grand Canyon”, the Grand Canyon’s overwhelming attraction to comparison is wealthily displayed in the creative traditions of analogy, metaphor, and neology. Writers everywhere have been affected by some aspect of physical space, cultural surrounding, or imaginative concept that conveyed the image or idea of the Grand Canyon. Many of the expressions listed here are taken from published literature and from internet websites, attended by liberal doses both of imaginative and poor writing skills; sometimes whimsy and wackiness make their ways into the list. Some even are a Grand Canyon of a stretch of the imagination!

In the compilations that follow, the spelling “cañon” in the original sources is usually rewritten as “canyon”. Many, if not most, of the cited examples here are direct quotations, although quotation marks are omitted in these lists to avoid distraction; the actual examples are on file. The lists are updated through 2024.

In this volume, the numbers of things rather, supposedly, or implicitly like the Grand Canyon are as follows:

Analogies	264
Metaphors, euphemisms, and similes	741
Neological constructs	24
U.S. trademarks	99

GRAND CANYON : COLOSSAL MIRROR

Analogies are precisely formulated or other direct comparisons to the Grand Canyon, actual or attempted.

GO TO: Analogies

Metaphors may be created to convey such various concepts and contemplations as physical greatness, temporal vastness, or ponderous characteristics of physical features, emotional states, or abstract philosophical and intellectual perspectives. The metaphors include euphemisms and the model or design names of commercial products. Many metaphors are tortuous attempts at simile, with the occasional offensive comment; but a few of the offensive ones are so sophomorically egregious that they are omitted from this collection, lacking even a liberal definition of literary merit. Also not included in the collection are references to “Grand Canyon” that borrow upon Arizona’s promotional name, “Grand Canyon State”³⁶; for example, Grand Canyon University, Grand Canyon Council, Grand Canyon Chapter, or as associated with the names of clubs and organizations. Also omitted are declarative nomenclature such as street names or facilities (for example, Grand Canyon Avenue or The Grand Canyon Room).

Noticed as well is “the ‘Grand Canyon’ metaphor” itself, cited in a legal case pertaining to a matter of financial responsibility:

For example, in City of Miami Fire Fighters’ & Police Officers’ Ret. Tr. v. CVS Health Corp., 46 F.4th 22 (1st Cir. 2022), the court held that risk disclosures that “frame risks as merely hypothetical may be misleading when they resemble the ‘Grand Canyon’ metaphor, in that ‘one cannot tell a hiker that a mere ditch lies up ahead, if the speaker knows the hiker is actually approaching the precipice of the Grand Canyon.’” Id. at 35 (quoting Karth, 6 F.4th at 137). But a speaker only has a duty to disclose facts affecting the likelihood of that risk when the alleged risk had a “near certainty” of causing financial disaster or where the warned-of risk had already begun to materialize.³⁷

GO TO: Metaphors

Neological constructs include contrived words or phrases that embrace or are rooted in “Grand Canyon”, but which are not analogies or metaphors. Other neological constructs are United States Trademarks that list products and services, registered with the United States Patent and Trademark Office; these utilize the phrase “Grand Canyon” in their protected registered names.

Phrase	Definition
Grand Canyon	[seen referred to in a doctoral dissertation by Lluís Bosch Sánchez (Universitat de Girona, 2016), in Catalan, as “Expressió popular intraduïble provinent, segons sembla, del món del jazz.” (translated to English here: an untranslatable popular expression apparently from the world of jazz)]
Grand Cañyon	misspelling of either “canyon” or “cañon” [or perhaps intentional]
grand canyon phile	presumably an attempt to spell “Grand Canyonophile”, “Grandcanyonophile” or similar construct
Grand Canyoned	to have traveled in the Grand Canyon (in the context seen, specifically to have rafted the Colorado River through Grand Canyon)
Grand Canyoner	descriptor for a trip to or through the Grand Canyon (as in to do or to go on “a Grand Canyoner”)
Grand Canyonful	a fanciful, tremendously-sized but ambiguous unit of measure
Grand Canyoneer	one who hikes or climbs in the Grand Canyon; specifically in the backcountry
Grand Canyoning	descriptor for an extreme form of river running, without boats but using body protection (in the example seen occurred not in the Grand Canyon but the name was applied to the act)
Grand Canyoning	descriptor for visiting the Grand Canyon, or for hiking in Grand Canyon
Grand Canyonist	a pseudonymous author’s identifier; known from at least one individual who posted material to the web
Grand Canyonly	used as an adjective; used in this compound sense to express largeness of scale, whether physical or metaphorical
Grand Canyonophobe	one who fears or avoids visiting the Grand Canyon
grand canyons	noun, plural; in this compound sense a descriptor for numbers of large canyons, large gorges, etc. (for example, “these grand canyons”)
Grandcanyoniana	ephemera and intellectual accumulata relating to the Grand Canyon

Colorado River Nomenclature

HISTORICAL, BIBLIOGRAPHICAL, AND CARTOGRAPHICAL RESEARCH in the Grand Canyon–Lower Colorado River region can be confusing given the number of names by which the Colorado River has been known since its first European encounter in 1539. “Colorado River” appears elsewhere, too: in Texas (United States) and as “Río Colorado” or “Rio Colorado” in various places in the Spanish- and Portuguese-speaking world (a name that, incidentally, also was used for the Colorado of western America).

For the benefit of newcomers to the study of this region, and as a refresher for those who are more familiar with the region, a summary of names is below. The names pertain to the originally named stretch of the river—from the confluence of the Grand and Green Rivers in present-day Utah to the sea. (The name “Colorado” was legislatively applied to the Grand River in 1921, to allow the Colorado River to locate its headwaters in the state of Colorado, although geomorphological purists continue to recognize the Green River as the headwater main stream of this river basin.) Names in this list include those from manuscript and published materials, and misspellings. Some, particularly those from the 19th or 20th centuries, are mixtures of Spanish and other languages. Some names are misapplied from, or confused with, other (usually presumed) rivers.

Western Colorado

The Colorado had also been referred to as the "Seedskeeter", "Seedskadee", and variant spellings, which are corruptions of an Indigenous American pronunciation actually for the Green River (in the Upper Basin area). The Little Colorado River has been given comparably overlapping names, including a redundant "Río Colorado".

J. J. YOUNG, from a sketch by H. B. MÖLLHAUSEN.

Lith. of S. May & Knapp, 469 Broadway, N.Y.

CAMP - COLORADO PLATEAU

The RAVEN'S PERCH MEDIA colophon recalls this bird's habit of gathering and caching objects. Derived from original artwork by Balduin Möllhausen, it is a fine detail from the lithograph delineated by J. J. Young that is "General Report Plate VII" in Joseph C. Ives' Report Upon the Colorado River of the West, Explored in 1857 and 1858 (Washington, 1861), which depicts a wintry camp just south of the Grand Canyon. The scene was sketched and described by Möllhausen on April 10, 1858, while he was perched in a nearby tree. He noted (in translation here), "a couple of ravens [paar Raben] croaked morosely on the bare branches of a dried-up fir tree as they waited impatiently for our departure, so that they could scout around the abandoned campsite for fat morsels." (Möllhausen, Reisen in die Felsengebirge Nord-Amerikas bis zum Hoch-Plateau von Neu-Mexico, unternommen als Mitglied der im Auftrage der Regierung der Vereinigten Staaten ausgesandten Colorado-Expedition. Hermann Costenoble, Leipzig, 1861, Vol. 2, p. 83.) Möllhausen's original watercolor painting is now in the Amon Carter Museum of American Art (Fort Worth, Texas; <https://www.cartermuseum.org/collection/character-high-table-lands-1988146>).

Raven's Perch Media was created in 2018, but Möllhausen's remarks on this very scene were not discovered until the translation was made for Möllhausen's Grand Canyon, another Raven's Perch Media production (2022).

GRAND CANYON : COLOSSAL MIRROR

About the Author

My first field of study was geology at Rutgers University in the 1970s. For several years afterward I was in commercial publishing, writing about computer technology — before personal computers. In the early '80s I began a long period of employment in natural history study collections, first at the New Jersey State Museum, then in the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia. My 18 years in the Academy's employ began in 1986; before that I had been for 12 years a student research assistant and volunteer there. While on staff I was at various times a collection manager in several departments and collections — invertebrate paleontology, paleobotany, mineralogy, malacology, general modern invertebrates (a collection of organisms other than mollusks, insects and arachnids), diatoms, and botany; and continued to volunteer in vertebrate paleontology. My publications have embraced each of these fields — as well as historical and bibliographical topics about the Grand Canyon and Colorado River regions. Concurrently, for seven years I was editor and managing editor of the Scientific Publications branch of the Academy, which publishes peer-reviewed articles and monographs from authors around the globe in America's oldest uninterrupted line of serials on natural history, from 1817. During my time the first digital publications were also produced. My last five years at the Academy was as its Archivist, for which I had studied in the graduate program of Temple University's Department of History. On leaving the Academy in 2005 I continued my affiliation as an elected Research Associate. For the next 14 years I was Reference Archivist in the research library of the American Philosophical Society, a polymathic institution in Philadelphia founded in 1743 by Benjamin Franklin, whose staff supports the society's membership, visiting researchers from around the world, and graduate students on society fellowships. Since November 2018 I am enjoying an active retirement continuing all of these interests.

Following two visits to the Grand Canyon in 1974 that included my first canyon hikes, I began work on a bibliography of the canyon and the lower Colorado River country. In 1981, the Grand Canyon Natural History Association (now the Grand Canyon Conservancy) published the first edition as a part of its new Monograph series of scholarly publications. A second edition appeared in 1990, with a supplement in 1993. In January 2000, a completely revised bibliography was placed on the Association's website as a searchable database, which was frequently updated. In 2012 I privately published the first edition of THE GRAND CANON, a much-embellished resurrection of the print monograph, now in digital (PDF) format that can be viewed in book layout on screen or on paper. The fifth edition (2025) is significantly revised, embracing the 16th to 21st centuries, which in Volumes 1 and 2 cite 111,000 items in 115 languages.

In 1989, the 28th International Geological Congress convened in Washington, D.C., which also offered an ambitious series of field trips across the United States, two of them on the Colorado River through Grand Canyon. My first river trip was with the IGC. In 1990, I began working as a geology interpreter on yearly summer trips in Grand Canyon for a Colorado River outfitter, continuing this until 2001. I also participated in two scientific study trips through the canyon under the Glen Canyon Environmental Studies program administered by the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, on one of which I prospected for living mollusks, the first such investigation ever to have been made along this canyon river. In 1994, I had attended a Penrose Conference sponsored by the Geological Society of America, "From the Inside and the Outside: Interdisciplinary Perspectives on the History of Earth Science". This conference for the first time brought earth scientists and historians together to discuss how each approach research in their complementary fields; from it I developed new perspectives in my research activities, which extended into revisions of the Grand Canyon–Lower Colorado River bibliography. In 2000, I attended a geology symposium at Grand Canyon on "The Colorado River: Origin and Evolution", the proceedings of which were edited by Richard A. Young and me. In 2012 I was honored with the annual Pioneer Award from the Grand Canyon Historical Society. Among many affiliations I hold life memberships with the Grand Canyon Conservancy, the Grand Canyon River Guides, and the Arizona–Nevada Academy of Science.
